

RE: Assignment troubles

CAB403: Systems Programming

Fri 10/26/2018 2:20 PM

To: Grant Dare <grant.dare@connect.qut.edu.au>;

Dear Grant,

You may have an extension until 11:59pm Friday November 2. Attach this email (e.g. as PDF) to your assignment submission as proof.

Regards

The CAB403 teaching team

-----Original Message-----

From: Grant Dare

Sent: Friday, 26 October 2018 9:14 AM

To: CAB403: Systems Programming <cab403@qut.edu.au>

Subject: Assignment troubles

Hey team,

So I have a bit of a problem where my partner led me to believe that he had started the server before we even agreed to be in a team. Then I hassled him (almost) every day for him to push to the repo so I could test connection and functionality. Just last night he finally pushes something after me telling him I'm going to drop him. He pushed a server that listened and that was it. I then proceeded to write (an attempt, I must admit) multi thread clients, authentication and client communication while I was led to believe that he was working on the game logic. I asked him to push his work last night, which he did not, and then this morning he pushes a server that doesn't even initialise a clients game state correctly. During the time of him not pushing and pushing I had written what he had completed and basic communication.

Please advise if there are any actions I can take moving forward to possibly have an altered criteria or an extension.

~~~

Grant Dare

n9476512

Undergraduate student of Mechatronic Engineering at QUT